

Carolyn K. Robinson
Executive Producer

Carolyn K. Robinson has dedicated two decades to producing superior programming and commercials. From national to international projects, in locations as diverse as Alaska's Bering Straits and the Central American jungles, Robinson is an outstanding team builder with a unique ability to bring together the best shooter, writer, composer, picture cutter and talent to create award-winning media. Her teams also excel at managing high-end and complex productions.

In Spring 2007, Robinson worked for eight weeks on DreamWorks' Transformers. That experience motivated Robinson to focus her attention on feature films and to assume a lead role in the development of a proposed statewide film incentive program, which resulted in the introduction of Senate Bill 230 to the Alaska Legislature.

As Executive Producer of Aleut Story, Robinson secured public broadcasting distribution, and cash and in-kind contributions totaling over $800,000. She was equally adept at securing A-list talent, EMMY Award ® winner Martin Sheen.

Other career highlights include: Producer and Co-Author of The Discovery Channel's award-winning and best-selling multi-media program In The Company of Whales (narrated by Patrick Stewart); Alaska Producer for MTV's Music in High Places: Goo Goo Dolls; and Producer of Time Warner/Turner Original Productions Alaska's Bush Pilots, a highly-rated, nationally syndicated and internationally distributed documentary film.

Robinson has also worked as Producer of International Productions at The Discovery Channel and as Promotions Producer with Gannett (USA Today on TV) in Washington D.C.

Robinson is the co-owner of SprocketHeads, LLC, the only IA commercial signatory in Alaska. She oversees all of SprocketHeads' operations and works closely with national film industry executives and with the state's business and political leaders to ensure dynamic productions. Her numerous connections in Alaska's public, private and aviation sectors opens doors to unique production opportunities.

Robinson is past-president of the Alaska Film Group and current board member. She is also a member of the International Documentary Association.
